SELECTIVE FIELD BIBLIOGRAPHY IN ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

by

Edward Van Roy
Department of Economics
State University of New York at Stony Brook

This bibliography seeks to orient Ph.D. students to the literature in economic development. Emphasis is placed on theoretical and methodological contributions and controversies rather than on case studies. Selection and classification have inevitably been influenced by the bibliographer's own interests and preconceptions, which he has shamelessly permitted to work their will. As a result, no reader will be entirely satisfied with this compilation, and rightly so. The best that can be hoped for is sufficient compassion and interest to elicit constructive suggestions for improvement of future editions.

Contents

1. Basic texts, general readings collections, and other broad-ranging works
2. Historical foundations
3. Measuring development patterns
4. "Standard" theory and the equilibrium dilemma
5. Alternatives to the "standard" approach
6. Agriculture
7. Aspects of industrialization
8. The foreign sector
9. The public sector and development planning
